BIOGRAPHY

Jennifer Khoe is a Chinese-American actress with the perfect mix of professional work ethic and a super sweet personality.

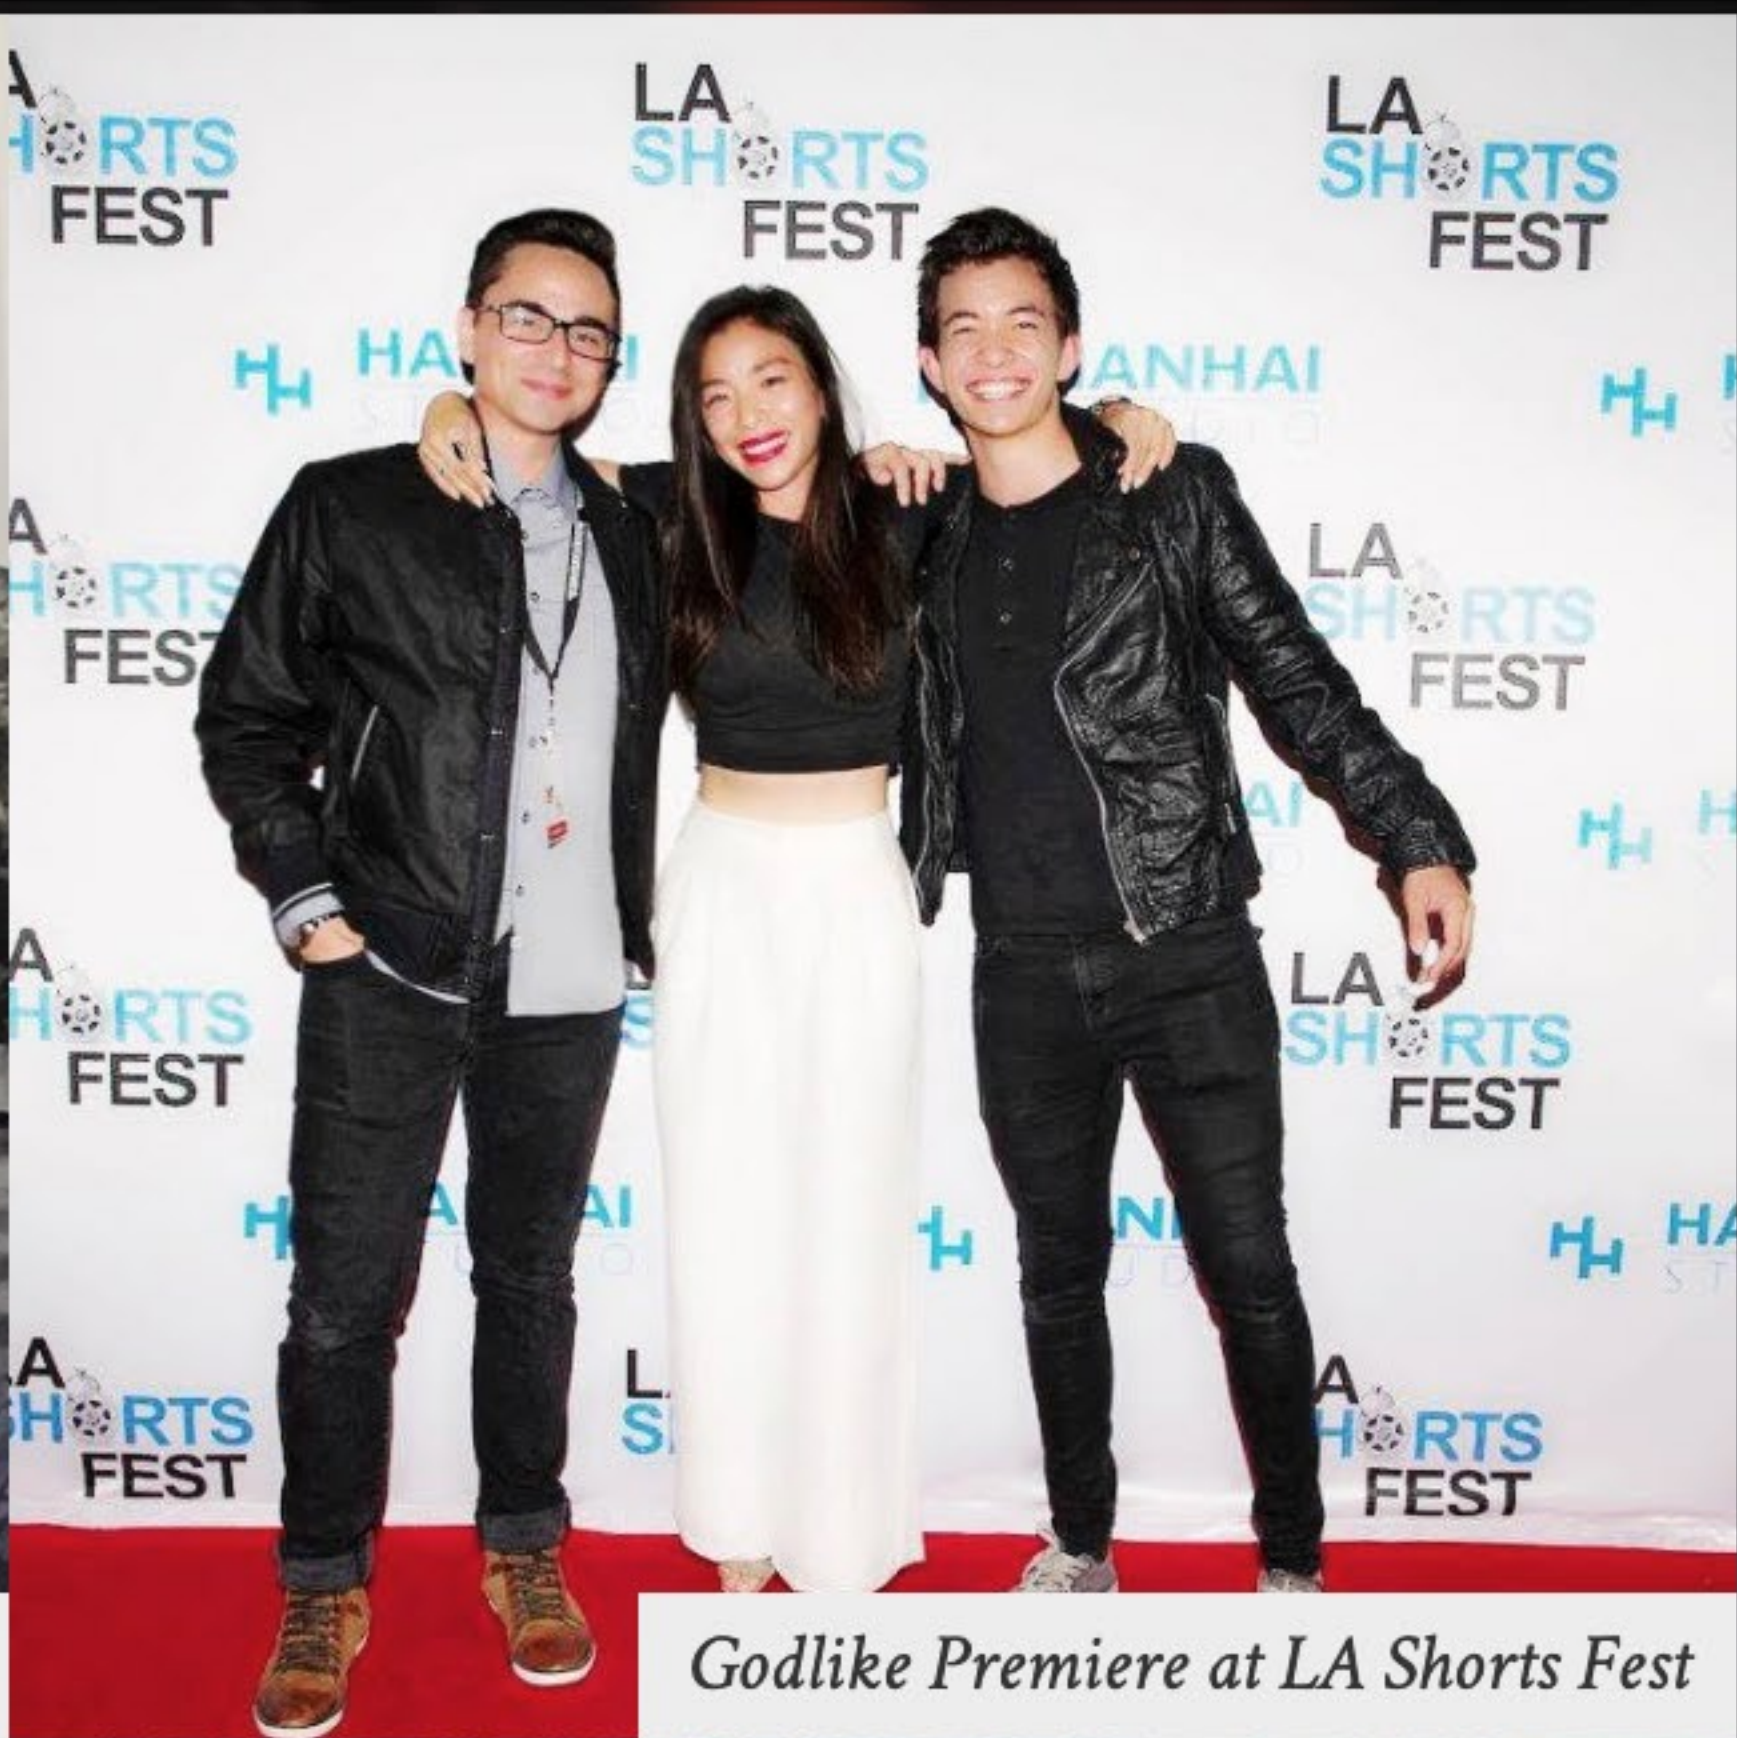

Jennifer has proven to be a versatile actress as she effortlessly tackles sci-fi and medical speak and transitions from loving young mom to ruthless ladder climber to contract killer with ease. Most recently she was cast as the compassionate yet headstrong wife of a navy seal in the nail biting indie action drama “Bone Cold”. Jennifer also plays a follow the rules lead mining engineer in the attraction film for Alien vs. Predator for the new Twentieth Century Fox World opening in Malaysia in late 2019 and took on a lead in an indie psychological thriller “Psychopaths” as a ruthless rookie detective, which premiered in the UK in 2017.

Born and raised in Vancouver, British Columbia, Jennifer was a competitively trained athlete and developed her acute work ethic and strong mental game. Jennifer graduated with a B.S. in Cognitive Neuroscience and a Law minor from the University of California San Diego and worked in the biotech industry until she moved to Los Angeles where she transitioned into entertainment. Jennifer also speaks Cantonese, is an expert level tennis player, and looks cool as hell on her motorcycle.

Realizing her interests lie beyond just performing, Jennifer has created a career both in front of the camera and behind the scenes and worked in many aspects of the industry. Jennifer established her own production company in 2017 and has line produced and cast indie films, music videos and commercials for a number of large advertising companies and international music labels including Beats Music, Google, X Factor, Intel, Universal Music, Interscope, and Sony Music Latin to name a few. From there, it was a natural progression and just a matter of time before Jennifer began writing, producing and acting in films. A short film she produced, Godlike, tells the story of a young Asian American gamer who is at odds with his grandmother and has amassed over $1M views on Youtube in both the North American and Asian markets. Jennifer is currently pursuing other feature projects and stories she hopes to bring to life on screen.
